

Writing the Literature Review Part 5

"The only stupid question is the one you don't ask"

Questions

These are questions that I answered for a live audience. Please feel free to submit questions through the question tool in Udemy or through my website. I will do my best to answer them.

Thank you for taking this class! In addition to offering online classes, I am available for consulting on academic projects. I provide scholarly consulting to individuals and institutions in the U.S. and internationally. Please see my website for details.

Cheers,
Daveena Tauber, Ph.D.
Scholar-studio.com

Slides

Do you have suggestions for people who are doing interdisciplinary work?

In the lit review, should you only talk about the work of individuals or should you also talk about schools of thought?

What do you do when you need to talk about someone's work in multiple contexts in the lit review?

Where do you provide context or background for your project? Does it go in the lit review?

What do you do when many of your sources aren't peer-reviewed scholarly sources?

When you find “rock stars” who have published multiple, similar articles, how do you decide which of their works to use?

How do I incorporate stuff that shows up in the news cycle that is relevant to my research, but is not peer-reviewed?